Titanium trauma products have a number of advantages:

- excellent biocompatibility
- high mechanical strength and corrosion resistance
- reduced ductility due to its unique hexagonal crystal structure.

Titanium plates are less stiff than stainless steel, improving fracture healing and preventing bone weakening due to stress-shielding¹.

Equinox Orthopaedics is the exclusive distributor of WEGO Orthopaedic Products.

Together, we are committed to maximising surgeon and patient satisfaction by delivering a dedicated service of orthopaedic products of the highest quality and value.

With over 10 years of collaboration with US and European orthopaedic manufacturers, WEGO has become an internationally recognised leader in orthopaedic manufacturing, with a reputation for uncompromising quality of materials and design.

WEGO ensures product quality at every stage of the manufacturing process. Starting with the highest-grade medical titanium, sourced with strict supplier controls, every device and instrument undergoes rigorous quality checks using the latest testing equipment and procedures.

WEGO has state-of-the-art manufacturing facilities, built to exceed the highest European and US standards*.

With a growing global operation that includes 26,000 employees across 100 offices, WEGO aims to set new benchmarks in quality by promoting an environment of continuous improvements in products, service, research, and manufacturing equipment.

WEGO is dedicated to innovation and reinvests almost 10% of all profits into product design and materials research, with over 50 patent families currently in force. WEGO products have been registered in over 20 countries, with major launches in 2017 in the US, 2018 in Europe and now in Australia and New Zealand.
